

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

Indiana's Telephone Privacy Act is awesome! I was getting six to ten telemarketing calls every evening trying to sell me siding, lawn car and any number of items. Some did not understand the meaning of the word "No", forcing me to hang up on them. Since Indiana enacted the new telephone privacy law, I am able to enjoy quiet evenings and days off without being harrassed by telemarketers trying to sell me stuff I do not want - like siding for a house I do not own (I'm a renter).

We've got a good thing here in Indiana; don't screw it up!
